

ADOBE PDF/IS PATENT LICENSE

Adobe has a number of patents covering technology that is disclosed in (a) the Portable Document Format (“PDF”) Specification, version 1.4 and later, as documented in PDF Reference and associated technical notes (the “PDF Specification”), and (b) the Portable Document Format: Image-Streamable Format (“PDF/IS”) Specification, version 1.4, (the “PDF/IS Specification”).

This document is intended to expand upon the rights that Adobe grants to certain intellectual property necessary to implementation of the PDF/IS Specification. Such Specification includes rights under copyright to make reproductions and to display and distribute those reproductions, subject to certain terms and conditions as described in Section 1.4 of the PDF Specification. The purpose of this document is to provide a reciprocal patent license to individuals and organizations interested in implementing software programs that can read and write files that conform to such Specifications.

Please read this entire document carefully to understand your rights.

Patent License

Adobe may have patents and/or patent applications that are necessary for you to license in order to make, sell, or distribute software programs that read or write files that comply with the Adobe PDF/IS Specification.

Except as provided below, Adobe hereby grants you, and you grant Adobe, a royalty-free, nonexclusive, worldwide license under Adobe's or your respective Necessary Claims (defined below) to make, use, sell, offer to sell, import, and otherwise distribute Licensed Implementations (defined below) solely for the purpose of reading and writing files that comply with the PDF/IS Specification.

A “Licensed Implementation” means only those specific portions of a software product that reads and writes files that are fully compliant with the PDF/IS Specification.

The term “Necessary Claims” means claims of a patent or patent application that are owned or controlled by Adobe or you and that are necessarily infringed by reading or writing files pursuant to the requirements of the PDF/IS Specification. A claim is necessarily infringed only when it is not possible to avoid infringing when conforming to the PDF/IS Specification because there is no technically reasonable non-infringing alternative for reading or writing such files. The existence of a non-infringing alternative shall be judged based on the state of the art at the time a licensee implements PDF/IS. Notwithstanding the foregoing, Necessary Claims do not include any claims: (i) that would require a payment of royalties by Adobe or you to unaffiliated third parties; (ii) covering any enabling technologies that may be necessary to make or use any product incorporating a Licensed Implementation (e.g., word processing, spreadsheet or presentation features or functionality, programming interfaces, protocols); (iii) covering implementation of technology developed elsewhere and merely incorporated by reference into the PDF/IS Specification, or (iv) covering the reading or writing of files generally or covering the reading or writing of files other than those complying with the requirements of the PDF/IS Specification. For purposes of the Necessary Claims definition, the above license shall be deemed to apply only to architectural and interoperability requirements and shall not apply to any implementation examples or any other material that merely illustrates the requirements of the PDF/IS Specification.

If you distribute, license or sell a Licensed Implementation, this license is conditioned upon you requiring that the following notice be prominently displayed in all copies and derivative works of your source code and in copies of the documentation and licenses associated with your Licensed Implementation:

"This product may incorporate intellectual property owned by Adobe Systems Incorporated. The terms and conditions upon which Adobe is licensing such intellectual property may be found at [http:// \[REFER TO THE SITE WHERE THIS APPEARS\]](#)."

By including the above notice in a Licensed Implementation, you will be deemed to have accepted the terms and conditions of this license. Except as set forth above, the name, logo and trademarks of Adobe may not be used in any manner without specific, written prior permission.

No license shall be extended to those implementing only draft versions of PDF/IS unless that implementation is only used for testing and prototyping purposes.

You are not licensed to distribute a Licensed Implementation under license terms and conditions that contravene or prohibit the terms and conditions of this license. You are not licensed to sublicense or transfer your rights under this license. The rights and licenses granted herein may not be assigned by you without Adobe's prior written consent.

Adobe reserves the right to terminate this license grant if you sue Adobe, any of Adobe's affiliates, or any other party for patent infringement over claims relating to reading or writing of files that comply with the PDF/IS Specification.

This Agreement shall be interpreted and governed under the laws of the State of California as such laws are applied to agreements entered into and to be performed entirely within California between California residents. All disputes relating to this Agreement shall be brought in the competent state or federal court located in Santa Clara County, California.

You should consult applicable export control laws and regulations to determine whether they apply to your Licensed Implementation.
